LIFE IN AMERICA'S NAVY RESERVE

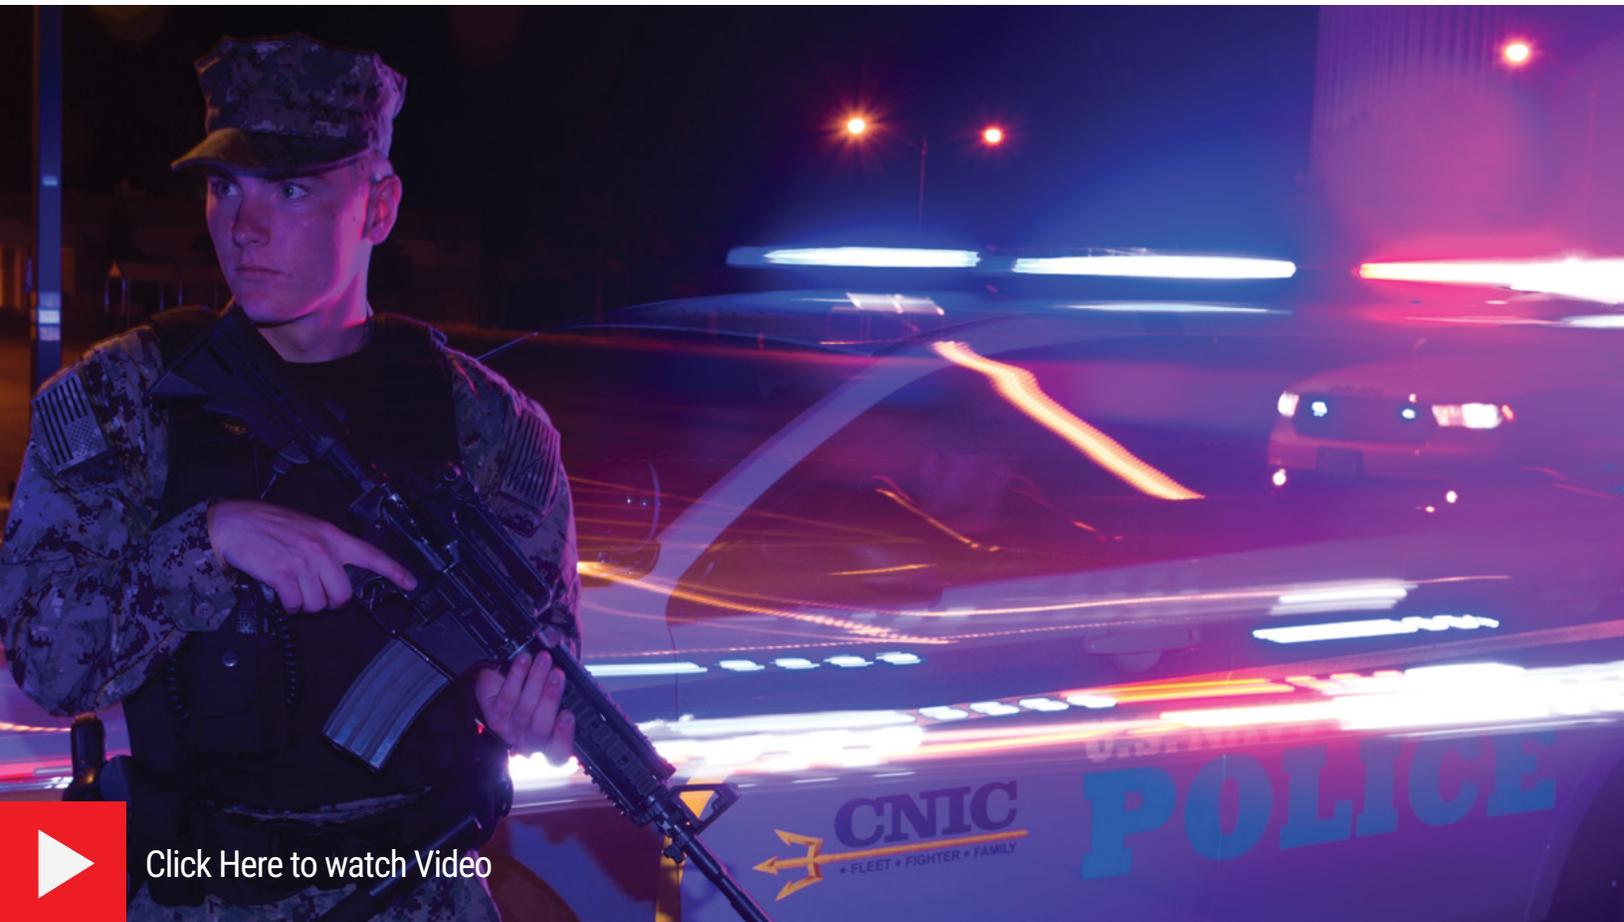

Serve and Protect

America's Navy Reserve and Active Duty Sailors are working every day around the world protecting our nation's interests, but being a part of this effort doesn't mean you have to leave everything behind. You can do your part and still take care of business at home.

As a Navy Reservist you will join proud men and women who have dedicated themselves to protecting America, and taking care of their families at home. You'll be held to the same high standards as active duty Sailors, and you'll earn the same high levels of respect and reward. Navy Reservists are integral members of the U.S. Navy and dedicate themselves to the mission of national security around the world.

Your service in America's Navy Reserve not only benefits the nation, it will help you enhance your civilian opportunities as well. When you drill in the Navy Reserve, you will learn discipline, leadership skills, as well as professional expertise that will help you advance in your civilian career. You'll earn a competitive salary. A Navy Reserve paycheck can help you take care of your family, pay for college and save for retirement. Other benefits include worldwide travel, healthcare, dental, and the knowledge that you are truly making a difference. Best of all, this is a part-time job where you can build retirement benefits.

As a Master-At-Arms (MA) in America's Navy Reserve, not only will you earn all the benefits of being in the Navy Reserve, you will play a vital role in our nation's defense. There is no more important role in the Navy today than providing security for our people and our mission. As a Navy Reserve law enforcement professional, you will work with the latest technologies and anti-terrorism techniques while collaborating with some of America's top security personnel. MAs gain invaluable experience in crime prevention, physical security, threat assessment and more.
